

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Image data is separated from three lines of image data in accordance with the storage capacity of the source memory. The separated image data is transferred to a source memory. Several pieces of image data are read out in sequence from the transferred image data and forwarded to filtering process. The above steps are repeated to provide a line of filtered image data.